The other Tuscany

The magic of winter in an idyllic Tuscan resort

Antonella Euli

Rosewood Castiglion del Bosco, is a magical place, covering an area of 2,000 hectares in the heart of the Val D'Orcia, a UNESCO World Heritage Site. The Montalcino estate, founded by Massimo and Chiara Ferragamo in 2003, best expresses Rosewood's philosophy of "a sense of place" and includes a 5-star L resort with 23 suites. Its centre is located in the Borgo, where can be found the ruins of the ancient castle dating back to 1100 AD; 11 Villas, each with a private swimming pool; The Spa at Rosewood Castiglion del Bosco; Campo del Drago Restaurant and Osteria La Canonica, serving traditional Tuscan and Italian dishes, under the guidance of chef Matteo Temperini; an organic vegetable garden and cooking school; and, finally, the Kids Club with activities organised by the Rose Buds® Children's Program. Castiglion del Bosco is also home to The Club, the only private golf club in Italy with 18 holes designed by the British Open champion

Tom Weiskopf on 210 hectares of gently sloping hills. The winery, with its 62 hectares of vineyards is where all the estate's wines are produced. The best way to experience the charm and fascination of Tuscany in winter is a stay in one of the exclusive villas, restored 17th and 18th century farmhouses with private heated swimming pools, terraces, pergolas and gardens, all framed by the magnificent hills of the Val d'Orcia. The villas are characterized by artisan furnishings and all modern comforts, fully-equipped kitchens and Tuscan-style fireplaces. Able to accommodate up to twelve guests, the 11 villas are ideal for groups of friends and families who want to get together, relax and spend time enjoying the wonders that Tuscany has to offer during the winter season: from the dusky golden shades of the woods, to the heady scent of truffles and freshly-pressed olive oil.a.
